

Heritage Textile Arts Guild

The month of March marked HTAG's Guild first in person meeting since last June. Covid cases were high summer-spring in Coos County and members were unwilling to meet. Because of the rural nature of the county few members could take advantage of zoom so that was not a good option. So, everyone was excited about being able to meet and talk about future plans.

The group discussed reinstating the delayed dyeing workshop with Janis Thompson and the application to have a booth at the Blackberry Arts Festival in August. Chairpersons volunteered to get those activities started. Kim Palmer showed some of her latest Krokbragt weaving and discussed when the guild loom would be ready for the class she will teach. The gnome felting class was also discussed.

Everyone was eager to get the group going again. One member is even helping two new weavers get their looms set up.
