

WEBFOOT WEAVERS

BROOKINGS, OR

FALL 2024

We discussed any issues that we had with our guild challenge, placemats. We reviewed our coiled basket/ plate project and had discussion on if we wanted to continue and make a basket. That was a negatory by all.

May, for our scholarship program, we worked on clasp weaving on small looms ordered off Amazon. It is deceptively easy to do and I for one plan on using this process soon. An added bonus was that we're were able to use up odd bits of yarns we had.

June, we continued working on our clasp weft weaving and discussed any problems we encountered. Not many of use were pleased with the looms we worked with, very tiny shed, but they were affordable and we were able to at least get the concept.

July was our off month.

August, we had ice dying day with potluck. We had 2 guests from our local yarn store come and ice dye for the first time. Everyone had a good time and I only had time to place some yarns into the bottom of other people's pans. Everyone had great choices in colors and I for one was greatly pleased with the results! I was inspired and for next few days did ALOT of ice dying and can't wait to weave with the yarns.

At our September mtg, we has a special guest. Donna Wilson was in our area doing her campground thing and was able to come to our mtg. She brought up the subject of having regional WEGO conferences instead of one big one as in the past. We kicked around ideas on how to do it and keep costs down and interest up and also how areas could be divvied up among the guilds.

We also discussed our upcoming program for October and November on needle weaving and what folks need to bring to create their project.
